Patrick Flynn is a formally trained fine artist, illustrator and designer. He received his education at the Kansas City Art Institute and the University of Minnesota. Patrick's work has been shown in numerous galleries and museums, including The Minneapolis Institute of Arts. His pieces are also included in many private collections. His client list includes Kodak, Wacom, Cargill, Disney, Marshall Fields and Wells Fargo.

After a 15 year career in marketing, working for Nordstrom, The Minneapolis Institute of Arts, and D'Amico & Partners (a nationally recognized and award-winning collection of restaurants based in Minneapolis) and a lifetime of being crafty, Angela found herself at a crossroads after the birth of her first child. She decided to retire from corporate life in 2000 and become a "mompreneur", beginning a home-based business making personalized ceramic hand and footprints, Little Piggy Prints. Soon she had moved from her dining room studio to working with the most exclusive baby boutiques in the Twin Cities.

After several years in Minneapolis, Patrick and Angela now make their home in Vancouver, Washington, along with their children, Sean and Molly.
